2048 THE CELEBRATED PLANTAGENET TAPESTRY, said to represent the marriage of Henry VI. and Queen Margaret, a composition of twenty-two figures, including portraits of Cardinal Beaufort, and other celebrated personages of that period, with monogram on the drapery—10 ft. square. Formerly in the Collection of Mr. Yarnold, of Great St. Helen's, London, and said to have been presented by Henry VI. to St. Mary's Hall, Coventry. Mr. Planché, in his notice of tapestry of the Middle Ages, in the Archæological Journal, of June 1856, conjectures that the figures are intended for Henry VII., Elizabeth of York, Cardinal Morton, &c. He says, the costume in which both the male and female personages appear has never been found in any painting or sculpture previous to the commencement of the reign of Henry VII. (1485), and as neither Edward IV., Edward V., nor Richard III. would be likely to make such a present to the city of Coventry, or order such a work to be executed for any purpose, it must be ascribed to the reign of Henry VII. (See Archæological Journal which accompanies it.)

This extraordinary tryptic was during twenty-one years one of the rarest gems in the private collection of Dr. Böhm, Director of the Museum of Medals at Vienna, who states that it was presented by the Pope to the Emperor about the middle of the fourteenth century, and that records exist of its having been handed over by an Empress at the end of the fifteenth century to a convent of nuns, together with a quantity of relics, the authenticity of some of which were attested by the Pope himself. It remained in the church attached to the convent until its suppression in the reign of Joseph II., when it passed into the hands of one of his chief officers, from whom it was purchased by Mr. Böhm: purchased by Mr. Falcke of Mr. Böhm, in April 1855, against the Directors of the Vienna Museum. This beautiful work is fully described in Mr. Digby Wyatt's Notices of Sculpture in Ivory, published by the Arundel Society, and by him attributed to the School of Andrea d' Ognibene or Cione. (See Illustrations, and Mr. D. Wyatt's pamphlet and letter from Dr. Böhm.) Exhibited at the Art Treasures Palace, at Manchester
